Achieve universal primary education

Where do we stand?

Considerable progress has been made in expanding primary education enrolment since 1990, particularly since the adoption of the MDGs in 2000.

The global number of out-of-school children has fallen considerably since 1990, although the pace of improvement has been insufficient to achieve universal primary enrolment by 2015. Currently, 57 million children of primary school age are estimated to be out of school, down from 100 million in 2000. Of these, 33 million are in sub-Saharan Africa, and more than half (55 percent) are girls.

Adjusted net enrolment rate for primary education, 2000 and 2015 (Percentage)
