- Review of Research Articles related to the topic and discussion on the same
- Learning through corporate videos developed by students on specific topics from the subject
- Learn by Teaching
- Business Games and simulations

- Visualise your future: Every entrepreneurship subject class starts with visualization exercise. Students have to stay calm for few minutes and then faculty gives them a situation to visualize. For example: “Think that you have no more jobs left in any of the companies. The only way you have to survive is by starting something on your own. What is it that you think you will start after MBA to earn for your living?” Students will be given sufficient time to visualize the entire situation and then they have to share their inputs with the class. Faculty keep ask questions intermittently to get full details about their visualization and to take hints from their inputs to start topics. Situations for visualization are based on the topics to be taken up in the class.
- Thinking Black Board: Similar to brainstorming technique. The students are called randomly to the board and given a word or term or sentence like; sole proprietorship. They have to quickly write any word connected to sole proprietorship on the board and others have to think the connection between the word on the board and sole proprietorship. They have to then make note of the connection on a sheet of paper or their books.
- Question Relay: This method is used to check the understanding of the student from the class. Faculty asks a question related to the subject to the class or one student. In case the student answers it right he/she asks another question related to the subject to one of the classmates of their choice. In case the student fails to answer he/she have to nominate any other person in the class to answer the question on their behalf.

Best Practice 1

1. Title of the practice: Assessment of student Learning Styles and SWOT Analysis carried out for students for better assessment and planning.

Teaching to suit Student Learning Styles

We introduce the concept of learning space as a framework for understanding the interface between student learning styles and the institutional learning environment. We illustrate the use of the learning space framework in three case studies of longitudinal institutional development. Finally, we present principles for the enhancement of experiential learning in higher education and suggest how experiential learning can be applied throughout the educational environment by institutional development programs, including longitudinal outcome assessment, curriculum development, student development, and faculty development.

2. Goal:

To understand the learning style of every student is necessary for effective class interaction.

3. The Context:

Teaching in Higher Education requires multi dimensional methods and process to impart education and skill development. Though there is no set of rules to teaching methods, it is the teaching environment and college administration that design a suitable method to practice in the campus class rooms. The greatest challenges encountered by faculty members could be to understand-What my student learning method is? How can I adapt my teaching method to suit my student needs?

Students preferentially take in and process information in different ways: by seeing and hearing, reflecting and acting, reasoning logically and intuitively, analyzing and visualizing, steadily and in fits and starts. Teaching methods also vary. Some instructors lecture, others demonstrate or lead students to self-discovery; some focus on principles and others on applications; some emphasize memory and others understanding.

When mismatches exist between learning styles of most students in a class and the teaching style of the professor, the students may become bored and inattentive in class, do poorly on tests, get discouraged about the courses, the curriculum, and themselves, and in some cases change to other curricula or drop out of school.

Many people recognize that each person prefers different learning styles and techniques. Learning styles group common ways that people learn. Everyone has a mix of learning styles. Some people may find that they have a dominant style of learning, with far less use of the other styles. Others may find that they use different styles in different circumstances.

4. The Practice:

Online sources are available in plenty. Not all are effective and reliable of result. After careful research in internet search engines the following website was suitable to our needs: (URL:<https://www.engr.ncsu.edu/learningstyles/ilsweb.html>).

It provided instant results with description. This online evaluation was designed by Richard M. Felder and Barbara A. Soloman at North Carolina State University. Dr. Richard M. Felder is Hoechst Celanese Professor Emeritus of Chemical Engineering at North Carolina State University, Raleigh, North Carolina.

RVIM Computer Lab is engaged to conduct the evaluation. The online tool will be administered to the students which provide a score sheet at the end of the process. The students are informed to send the same to a common e-mail id.

5. Evidence of Success:

The result sheet presented some of the suggested methods of learning based on their style of learning Viz.

- Visual: You prefer using pictures, images, and spatial understanding.
- Verbal: You prefer using words, both in speech and writing.

6. Problems encountered and resource required:

The process of learning style assessment is time consuming and it is a challenge to accommodate the assessment sessions in the computer labs. Further this has to be done for small groups, generally section wise.

It requires computer lab with uninterrupted internet facility and a competent tool administrator for administering the test.

SWOT Analysis

SWOT is an important planning tool that helps students of the Institute to identify in a systematic and organized way, their strength and weaknesses. It helps to identify the best opportunities available for a student - to enhance and achieve their set goals, to overcome the challenges that they may encounter. This SWOT Framework is been adopted for the student community in order to understand, evaluate and channelize the students potential, thereby they are able to develop their skills, to become competent and be a good citizen.

2. Goals:

1. To identify various traits within the student.
2. To synergize students traits with the environment.
3. To build their strength, dilute their weaknesses, exploit the opportunities around and overcome their challenges.
4. To channelize their skills sets (strength) and rise above their weaknesses through training & development programme.

3. The Context:

SWOT Analysis has been initiated after analyzing certain issues of the students such as issues related to communication in English language as many students had less exposure in the area of communication. Moreover, there were students especially from non - commerce background who had difficulty in understanding the management subjects. Some of the students who stayed in private accommodation had certain issues of adjusting to the hostel or paying guest accommodation. All this led to the process of knowing the strengths and weaknesses of the students so as to facilitate them to work on their strengths for better academic performance.

4. The practice:

The SWOT Process:

- Create form which contains basic questions to identify students strengths and weaknesses.
- This form will be given to individual students to duly fill in and return the form within two working days.
- To prepare a faculty group of two in a team. This grouping is done on the bases of faculties who engage 1st semester and 4th semester classes.
- The form will be provided to the respective Faculty members four days in advance to know the student better.

- On the day of the event, the faculty will have SWOT Analysis Sheet, Student Awareness Form and the student to analysis his/her strength and weakness.
- To collect the feedback from the faculty groups, analysis it and document it.
- Finally, prepare a brief report and submit the same to the Director for his perusal.

5. Evidence of success:

SWOT Analysis has helped the students to identify their own strengths, take up challenges, overcome obstacles and difficulties in their day to day life. Parents, guardians and all other relevant stakeholders are aware and appreciative of the help the students get through this process.

6. Problems encountered and resource required:

It was a challenge to schedule the entire SWOT process and give adequate guidelines to the faculty members regarding the parameters that need to be considered for this process. Further, these parameters are only indicative and give a cursory picture of the students' strengths and weaknesses. It does not take into consideration the finer aspects of the student abilities.

The main resource required is competent human resources to effectively conduct SWOT analysis.

Best Practice 2

1. Title of the practice: Culture based Holistic Management Education with Social, Entrepreneurial and Corporate dimension.

2. Goal:

To guide students on to a path of academic, professional and human excellence, imbibe in them application based life skills, thereby enabling them to lead a successful personal and professional life.

3. The Context:

Contextual Features for Student Development

Student years are the most formative years of intellectual growth. This is when individuals most favorably respond to inputs of learning, unlearning and relearning.

Knowing the individual interests, capabilities, past performances and achievements even as we categorize them under different grades, would enable us to provide better guidance, support and relevant inputs to the students, thus bringing about an all round development in them.

Efforts are made to inculcate in the students the various values and ethical conduct through a number programmes and events organized by the Centre for Indian Culture and Heritage, which is a unique feature of our institution.

4. The practice:

Career training with adequate importance to Entrepreneurship Development programmes are organised. CSR activities are conducted regularly and integrated with curriculum. Further the activities are strengthened by various events conducted by the Centre for Indian Culture and Heritage. Management Fests are conducted on a regular basis as also cultural events and more importantly sports activities. These activities which have been carried out regularly have yielded consistent results by way of students gaining an edge in the placement season.

5. Evidence of Success:

The programme has been successful, yes. However, the success observed is seen to be more qualitative than purely quantitative.

Success of the practice has been observed in the following aspects:

- ⤴ Increased placement percentages
- ⤴ Better feedback received from industry / individual companies on the quality and attitude of students / trainees / interns /
- ⤴ Higher confidence levels, communication skills and life skills observed to be ingrained among students fraternity
- ⤴ Increased participation in management fests, co-curricular and extra-curricular activities at intra and inter college levels.
- ⤴ Higher number of wins / visibility in management fests, co-curricular and extra-curricular activities at intra and inter college levels.
- ⤴ Imbibing of the competitive spirit and graceful acceptance of small failures by the students.

Problems encountered and resource required

The biggest challenge that is encountered in implementing all the aspects as part of holistic education, like co-curricular activities, extracurricular activities, sports, events pertaining to Indian Culture and Heritage, Entrepreneurship development activities and so on along with the University prescribed curriculum. Another big challenge is the time constraint.

The primary resource required for imparting holistic education is the initiative and skill on the part of faculty members in organising the various events and activities.
