

7.3 Evidence of success for Learner Centric Model

Based on the feedback areas of success through Learner Centric Model have been identified as follows

- a. Better Admissions: The PG CET cut off has reduced from past few year.

Year	PGCET I round cut-off
2018-19	517
2019-20	461
2020-21	417

The table indicates that the creamy layer of students are attracted to the Institute due to the LCM initiatives.

There is feedback collected from the students for every learning foundation implemented at RVIM by the respective facilitators. From the overall feedback it can be observed that students were able to build on what they already know and are provided with opportunities to make connections between new concepts and existing ones. They have been cited that they have been able to build strong relationships between feelings and thinking processes. They have shared that they have acquired essential skills to reflect, conceptualize and plan for next steps.

The results can be assessed in:
