5. Student Experience / Learning Reflection

My internal inventory audit experience with Vibhuti Consultants for Airtel was a truly meaningful learning experience that helped me understand how auditing works in the real corporate world. It was my first opportunity to witness professional audit practices outside the classroom, and it gave me a clear picture of how theory is applied in real business situations.

Through this experience, I learned how important physical verification of inventory is and how it is matched with official records and documents. I understood that auditing is not just about checking numbers, but about ensuring accuracy, transparency, and reliability in financial information. Seeing how auditors carefully examine each detail helped me realise the value of discipline, responsibility, and ethics in professional work.

The experience also taught me how important teamwork and communication are in a professional environment. Observing experienced auditors handle the process calmly and systematically made me appreciate the structured approach required in audit work. Even in a short one-day audit, I gained clarity on how inventory management, documentation, and control systems function in large organisations.

This practical exposure boosted my confidence and made me more interested in the field of auditing and finance. Overall, the inventory audit was a simple yet powerful learning experience that helped me grow both academically and personally, and it motivated me to take my future professional responsibilities more seriously and confidently.
