Dr. Sheelan Mishra introduced faculty members to the Harvard Business Publishing (HBP) platform, focusing on its rich features and practical application in academic settings. Participants explored how to effectively select and integrate case studies into their curriculum, leveraging HBP's extensive library of resources to enhance learning experiences.

One of the workshop's primary objectives was to familiarize educators with the methodology for preparing and presenting case studies. By understanding HBP's structured approach, faculty members could facilitate engaging classroom discussions, encouraging critical thinking and problem-solving among students. The platform's resources enable instructors to simulate real-world business challenges, fostering experiential learning.

In addition to exploring HBP's case studies, participants were introduced to its teaching tools, including simulations and interactive modules. These tools are designed to replicate business scenarios, allowing students to practice decision-making in dynamic environments.

The session also highlighted the importance of aligning course objectives with the appropriate resources available on the HBP platform. Faculty members engaged in collaborative activities, sharing strategies for utilizing case studies effectively and tailoring content to their specific course requirements.

Through this workshop, educators gained valuable insights into how the HBP platform can transform teaching practices, enrich course content, and prepare students for professional challenges.

Feedback & Coordinator Comment:

Participants expressed highly positive feedback about the workshop, appreciating the hands-on approach and practical insights provided. Many highlighted the clarity with which the platform's features were explained, particularly the methodology for selecting and using case studies. They found the session engaging and informative, with several noting that it inspired new ideas for classroom discussions. Overall, attendees commended the workshop for enhancing their teaching strategies and fostering a deeper understanding of experiential learning tools.
